

FM radio is worthless. If they want to stop satellite radio, they should provide the same quality of service (traffic reports, information, and even good music). I've actually called my local radio stations and asked them why they play the same music over and over and why there are so many annoying things, and they indicated that what I wanted was not a money maker. So I subscribed to XM Radio -- I guess what I wanted was a money maker. Therefore, I think satellite radio should be able to have their traffic and weather channels. Let FM compete in the open market.
